Katherine Chang Liu, February Guest Artist

Please join us to welcome our first guest artist, a returning CWA Workshop favorite, Katherine Chang Liu.

Katherine Chang Liu

“In recent years my work often has come from my reading. Words lead to ideas. Sometimes a word or two will trigger the imagination enough to create a series.

I keep a note book for such words. When I started out years ago, I relied on visual information to feed my work. Now I begin with the idea, and generate sketches for my work. My painting process is a process of addition and subtraction, during which I try to edit the image down to only what is needed.”

Newspaper Review of Solo Exhibit in Turku, Finland, 2001

“In Liu’s work what is especially fascinating are the details that lead to reflections of the ‘unfinished’ state of things. The West is obsessed with time. How would our perception and goals change if we were to be defined by our pace? You can say that Katherine Chang Liu’s work encourages us to continued on page 2” pace life, to return to introspection, examine the past, and in general, to slow down.”

As CWA welcomes Katherine back for the 3rd time in recent years, you may ask why we have continued to invite her, given the wealth of artistic talent out there. The simple reason is that our members keep requesting her. Some of her students refer to her as the “The Art Whisperer,” a tribute to her ability to relate to each artist’s ideas and strengths right away, and help in their development of those ideas.

Katherine clearly is doing something right, as she was featured in the American Artist March 2008 article entitled Watercolor: 20 Great Watercolor Teachers: Biographies and Artwork. Katherine has years of experience working with artists individually to help each painter develop his or her strengths and personal style. This approach is a major focus of the renowned Taos Intensive Studies Seminar (ISS), and Katherine is one of their key instructors. Ask previous CWA members who have studied with Katherine and you will get confirmation of the value of her workshop.

About Katherine – Artist, Teacher, Curator

Katherine Liu is an abstract painter and printmaker living in Southern California. Katherine has been featured in numerous international invitational exhibits, including Art Paris, Art Copenhagen and Art Miami. Her work is included in major publications and collections. She is a frequent invited juror of competitive shows, as well as a curator of shows for various galleries.

Since the early 90’s, Chang Liu has juried over 80 national, regional and statewide exhibitions and competitions, including Chair of Jury of Selection, National Watercolor Society International Competition (2014), Sole Juror for the Abstraction Category, The Artist Magazine Open Competition (2014), Sole Juror, International Society of Acrylic Painters, CA (2012), and Sole Juror for CWA’s 2011 National Exhibition.

Teaching has been a lifelong passion of Katherine’s, going back to tutoring math to elementary school kids. “My belief is that teaching is about the effective sharing of information, whether it is in math, science, or in art. Since 1978, I have been in the wonderful position of teaching where I want to, and working with artists in various capacities.”

Katherine has extensive experience as a curator as well. She was elected Co-Chair for the Nanjing Biennale, 2012, an International Invitational Biennale, based in Nanjing, China. She served with other CWA favorites, Co-Curator with John Salminen and Advisor Chang-Khee Chee. She is already looking forward to the next Nanjing Biennale in 2016, in which 100 artists from around the world will be invited to take part.

CWA is pleased to have her as our “keynote” artist for 2015. We hope to see you there to help us welcome her back.

Focus - Inspiration - Motivation

In our busy lives, my own included, we really have to focus our thoughts and actions to create or do... ANYTHING!

What do I mean by that?

It's simple. If we focus we can create a fabulous meal for our family, a beautiful garden, a wonderful home, an outstanding studio or workshop, a piece of art.

Focus leads to motivation. With inspirational material such as an art book or video, for a short time, try sitting alone in a room, outside in nature, or anyplace without distractions and you will find yourself being motivated. Maybe it's that snapshot you took while on vacation, that workshop or demo, or possibly it was just a glimpse of a person or building while walking. In any case, you were inspired and are now motivated to do your next project.

Once motivated, you will be able to hear your inner creativity. For me that will mean trying new paints that I received for the holidays. Changing up my palette to incorporate new colors. For you it may be trying a completely new style. Stretching your goals.

You may be motivated in other ways. You enjoy art and you enjoy belonging to an organization like California Watercolor Association, but you just don't have anything ready for an upcoming show. Don't be a bystander. Try volunteering on a committee (you get volunteer hours!). In either case GET MOTIVATED!

New paintings equal more new entries in CWA California Shows and of course the 46th National Exhibition. Maybe it will be your painting that inspires a new member. We also need people to work on these shows (did I mention - you get volunteer hours!). To make the shows bigger and better than ever. New people = new ideas.

Your CWA Board is focusing on the workings of our association. Past and present board members met in mid-January to strategize and create a cohesive member focused organization. How can we inspire and motivate you?

What will be your focus, inspiration, and motivation this year? Show your results in a show - volunteer on a committee. DO SOMETHING.

Sincerely,
Carol Husslein

“Open Studio” Workshop | Intermediate/Advanced

CWA Members $595, Non-Members $650.

See Katherine’s work at www.jenkinsjohnsongallery.com

The students who take Katherine’s class keep coming back for more. Why? Because Katherine gives every artist a great deal of personalized attention. In fact, that is really what Katherine’s classes are all about. This is Katherine’s 3rd seminar for CWA in recent years, and the reason is that our members keep requesting her. Clearly not all great artists make good teachers, but Katherine certainly does. She was featured in the American Artist March 2008 article entitled Watercolor: 20 Great Watercolor Teachers: Biographies and Artwork.

Katherine has years of experience working with artists individually to help each painter develop his or her strengths and personal style. This approach is a major focus of the renowned Taos Intensive Studies Seminar (ISS), and Katherine is one of their key instructors. Ask previous CWA members who have studied with Katherine and you will get confirmation of the value of her workshop. Apparently some of her students refer to her as the “The Art Whisperer,” a tribute to her ability to relate to each artist’s ideas and strengths right away, and help in their development of those ideas.

Regarding her teaching philosophy, Katherine says that her preference and strength is to work with artists one on one. “I pay much attention to the observation of each artist’s particular intent and ability in his work, and hopefully sort things out, and guide this artist’s further development. Sometimes I suggest small adjustments, and other times I try to work with the artist to find the clarification of his content, and how he might best express that content.”

Since this is an “open studio” workshop, each artist will bring the resource material and supplies most suitable for his or her own work. This is definitely not a “cookie-cutter” workshop!

Clean Out Your Studio!

The April 15 CWA Membership Meeting will be a White Elephant Sale. Members can bring the art gizmo that you used once, that paint color you loved in the catalog but turned out to be weird, the supplies you bought for a workshop and never used again, the art books with beautiful pictures that you never look at, etc., etc., to sell at this event. # 45TH NATIONAL EXHIBITION 2015

CALIFORNIA WATERCOLOR ASSOCIATION

New Signature Members recognized at the National Reception, The Harrington Gallery, Pleasanton, California on January 15, 2015

Congratulations!

Congratulations to CWA members who received their signature status at this year's National Exhibition Reception at the Harrington Gallery on Thursday evening, January 15.

The following members have been received into three national exhibitions and are now Signature Members of CWA: Robert Davidson, Geoff McCormak, Niz Brown, Suzanne Wilson, Kathy Byrne, Joyce Barron Leopardo, Nancy Near, Ruth Armitage and Anita Zymolka-Amrhein.

Those present enjoyed meeting many of these members in person and hearing their stories. Among them, Anita Zymolka-Amrhein and her husband Hans, came from Camano Island in Washington to receive her award.

A charming and vivacious personality punctuates Anita's art and her personal story. Born in Germany, she "escaped East Germany just a day before the Berlin Wall went up." With her husband Hans, she has lived and traveled throughout Europe and Asia. She studied at the Nanyang Academy of Fine Arts in Singapore, in Hamburg, Germany, and finally in the U.S. crediting Linda Doll, Michelle Tremaine, Skip Lawrence and Paul Jackson for helping to refine and shape her style.

Anita has exhibited throughout Europe and America and was accepted into the Shenzhen International Watercolor Biennial in 2013. She is a signature member of Northwest Watercolor Society (NWS) and now California Watercolor Society (CWA). Her life experiences have added a world vision to her creative journey. At her website, Zymolka.com she states, "Watercolors are ideal for my interpretations of nature's many treasures in their various forms." Take some time to visit all our new signature members websites and see how their work colors our world.

Dear Elizabeth...

Questions and answers about watercolor art

Try Something New In 2015

Like many others, I have thoughts of change as I begin the New Year. I am slow though and in mid-January, I am still thinking about resolutions for becoming a better person. For decades, my resolutions have centered on losing weight and exercising more. Sadly enough, success has been limited and this year, I am turning my attention to my work as an artist. I am considering how I might grow as a watercolor painter.

Growing means changing and change is an integral aspect of moving forward. So, how might I change and grow in the process? I decide the first step might be saying yes to something that I might ordinarily avoid. As a painter, I might try working on a different schedule. I might start from a different perspective, use different tools, different colors, or a different subject. I could use larger brushes, paint with a restricted palette, change my subject matter, or change the time commitment to my work. I might look for inspiration in new places.

I love figurative work and often find examples to consider. Maybe, I need to look at something completely different. Searching the five-minute Tate Shots introduces John Squire, former rock musician, and an experimental watercolor painter. I found Squire with his low key, North England accent interesting and unusual. I am including the website below.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=w9d9e0cOJPU>

I liked Squire's focus on process and his comment that the (watercolor) medium itself wants to pitch in and have a say in the painting. I know just what he means. I love the first moments when paint and water are moving on paper. I think most watercolor artists do. I also liked his playful testing of surfaces, images, and color.

Watching Squire's careful attention to the moment gives me some ideas. I might change my focus and concentrate on process rather than product. I might say yes to mindful moments during the painting process and think or worry less about creating a successful painting. I might say yes to the medium and work with the flow instead of trying to work with my idea for the painting. With Squire's work as inspiration, I came up with a plan.

Currently, I paint on one or two days during the month. I think I will start with the time schedule. For the next thirty days, I am planning to paint a little every day rather than a lot on one day. I am going to change my focus and work with the flow of paint rather than worrying about the final product. After thirty days, I can consider how the changes have worked for me. As a final inspiration, I am including a watercolor series by Cy Twombly, who developed this series of small watercolors during one day.

Souvenir de L'Ile des Saintes, 1979, watercolour and gouache on paper © 2011 Cy Twombly ARTIST ROOMS Tate and National Galleries of Scotland.

I would love to hear from you dear reader about how you are changing or growing as an artist. What have you tried? What works? What might you share with the CWA community about inspiration for change?
