March Guest Artist Jeannie Vodden

Riding the Wild Boar by Jeannie Vodden

When the Wind Blows by Jeannie Vodden

Our March 15th General Meeting guest and workshop artist is Jeannie Vodden, coming to us from the foothills of the Northern Sierra Nevada Mountains. Her cottage studio is located on the Jackson Creek in Jackson, CA. Jeannie was with us a couple of years ago, giving a workshop on florals. We enjoyed her very much, and after seeing some of her portraits, we invited her to come back and share her techniques for painting beautiful translucent portraits. Limited space is still available in that class; for information, please contact our registrar@californiawatercolor.org or sign up on our website.

Art is her love and her passion, and Jeannie dedicates her time to painting, drawing, teaching and the continuing study of both art and philosophy. “My desire is to bring to my work, the imagination and curiosity which is so often found in children... And to combine that sense of wonder with an experienced artist’s hand.”

Vodden is a versatile painter of portraits, still life, floral, landscape and fantasy in watercolor, her medium of choice. In our workshop and at the general meeting, she will share her rhythmic wet-on-dry approach to watercolor, using transparent staining color in portraits. She will demonstrate how to use a limited palette to heighten color, and how to see and paint light. With watercolor as her primary medium, she paints with pure staining transparent hues. Her painting process uses a series of glazes, layer upon layer, changing the colors and letting them mix on the paper. Her palette is quite limited – sometimes only three colors, occasionally as many as six to eight, but seldom more.

Jeannie loves painting the complex textures, forms and patterns found in nature. “The scales of a reptile, the random branches of a nest, the tousled hair of a young child, a dried leaf, are some of my favorites. It’s fun to compare and contrast man-made textures. A few I’ve attempted are: a crocheted scarf, the floral print in the folds of a woman’s dress, a glass vase. And when I add beautiful, natural light it changes the whole look and feel of each surface and pattern, overlaying complexity and changing form.”

As for portraits, Jeannie has been painting and drawing faces and portraits since she was very young, taking great pleasure early on to see a likeness emerge onto her paper. Many paintings later, casual, sun-dappled images of people, have become a major part of her work.

Little Beach Girl by Jeannie Vodden

Vodden also enjoys adding some fantasy to her paintings as well. She describes it as “not full-fledged fantasy art, but something that changes a regular portrait into an interaction with the magic of life.” She has added whimsical touches such as a fairy and tiny dragon into the hands of models. Granddaughter Elle and various friends have dressed up in costumes, be-jeweled, with a wreath on her head. She wanders through orchards and gardens searching for the perfect moment, with just the right lighting and pose.

Jeannie also enjoys painting florals and still life. “When I have no friend or model, I can group special, interesting and meaningful combinations of items together and watch the light, photographing and moving objects till I find something I want to paint.”

Come join us for a special evening of painting as we welcome back Jeannie Vodden to CWA. And yes, it is the Ides of March, so don't miss out!

CWA Membership Meeting And White Elephant Sale

Clean out your studio, kitchen table, spare rooms, or closets. Bring all those art goodies that you no longer use.

- Remember the workshop where you bought every item on the list, and only used them once?
- All those acrylic supplies? But now you only do watercolors?
- Boxes left over from your last move?
- Why not clear out some of the clutter? And give other artists a chance to try your forgotten paints, brushes, paper, books, and palettes, that are taking up space.

The public is welcome, so spread the word!

outreach

The Apple Project

Outreach is a vital part of the California Watercolor Association's programs. CWA volunteers serve veterans in Oakland and Martinez by providing them monthly and bi-monthly watercolor Outreach sessions. The Oakland group is all outpatient and the vets come from as near as across the street to as far as the Mt. Lassen area. They are by and large vets of the Vietnam war and have been in an occupational therapy program together for many years.

In Oakland Cody and George are experienced painters. George remarked "When I come to a CWA Outreach the project is in front me. I just get painting. At home on my own, I don't get that focus, the go for it factor."

Cody's Apples

George's Apples

The next Outreach in Oakland is scheduled for March 8th.
The next Outreaches in Martinez are scheduled for March 8th and 22nd.

The Complete Apple Project by Nancy Redden

We are proud of our current on-going Outreach programs with the vets in Oakland and Martinez and honored to demonstrate and paint with families at the California Academy of Sciences in San Francisco. CWA has a long term goal of outreaching to more young people. If you are connected to an institution that would enjoy and/or host an Outreach event contact us, outreach@californiawatercolor.org.

Juror of Acceptance-Karen Frey, (www.karenfrey.com). My work is a window to my life. I paint what I see, know, love and find entertaining. While my work is representational, my challenge is to question what I am actually seeing. I must interpret reality into an organized array of shapes, colors, and marks. I paint in both watercolor and encaustic. While these two mediums may seem as opposing as water and wax, they oddly share common characteristics. Most notable, they both encompass fluidity and transparency. While watercolor is a taxing medium, encaustic becomes a formidable adversary with the incorporation of fire. The content of my work suggest a narrative. I prefer a vague tale, allowing my viewer to engage in a personal interpretation. I utilize this same approach when painting. Audience participation is a requisite to translating my colors, shapes and curious edges into something tangible.

Juror of Awards-John Finger, (www.fingerart.com), grew up in the San Francisco Bay Area's Diablo Valley. And graduated from the California College of Arts and Crafts (CCA) in Oakland in 1977. He has traveled extensively around the World from Europe to Asia visiting art centers and collections, drawing from the works of the masters, and sketching and painting areas of interest and natural beauty. Although John is best known for his California landscapes, he continues to work on other studio and plein air paintings including the figure, still lifes and anything else that inspires painting. Currently, John exhibits, teaches classes, and holds workshops in Northern California.

Fun Facts & Historical Musings, Part I

Ever wonder how California Watercolor Association (CWA) became an organization? How long it has been in existence? Who started it, and why? I recently inherited one very large box, a 10-lb. binder, and photo albums full of facts and fun information about the early days of our organization.

Looking through the documents I was impressed with the accomplishments of our earliest members, the prestigious names that kept popping up in newsletters, and the energy and enthusiasm with which members embraced the art of watercolor. I also was reminded that getting organized and recognized didn't come easy and required a huge amount of dedication. We have a lot to be thankful for as we learn about these dedicated artists.

The earliest documents I could find went back to 1971, but I soon learned that the group started to organize sometime around the mid-sixties. But how did they do that? Imagine pre-1979 connectivity with only a telephone (today's land line) and snail mail to get the word out!

I made a call to one of our early members, Shirley Nootbaar, to find out more. Shirley was glad to talk about how she became involved with the group in the late 60s. As a young mother, she began taking painting classes from artist Peg Humphries. She soon learned that there was a group of very enthusiastic artists in her area who met frequently in Contra Costa County to paint in Plein Air. She quickly joined the group and arrived at one gathering carrying her new baby on her back. A favorite meeting place to paint was the Cowell Cement Works on the east side of Concord. They loved painting the tall brick chimney.

Shirley became an active member right away. Two names that often returned to her memories were Charlotte Panton and Peg Humphries, who inspired her with their knowledge and enthusiasm for sharing their love for watercolor. The small band soon began to talk about forming an official group in order to share their experience and passion with others, and especially to promote the art of watercolor.

Eastbay Watercolor Society

Digging through the binder and reading the minutes, I learned that the early name for our organization was Eastbay Watercolor Society or EWS. They embraced the idea of reaching artists in the north, south, east, and west of Contra Costa County. Shirley told me that the members grew to 35 or more, but at one time dipped to as low as six. She credits Peg Humphries and Charlotte Panton with spearheading the organization, and said that even at its lowest numbers, Peg Humphries would not give up. She was determined to hang on and see EWS grow as a respected state organization.

Starting in January 1971, the group began to petition for incorporation as a non-profit and educational organization. More than three years, and a lot of hard work, went into the official formation. Finally, on June 13, 1975, their dream was realized when EWS was officially granted Articles of Incorporation. Seven members were listed as signees on that document: President, Charlotte Panton; Vice-President, Peggy Humphries; Secretary, Barbara Luebke; Treasurer, Ruth E. Hoase; Corresponding Secretary, Nancy A. Havas; Annual Show Chairman Ned Dodds; and Member Show Chairman, Shirley Nootbaar.

A lot of watercolor has passed under the bridge since then, and there are a lot more stories to tell. Our paper files go from 1971 through 1996, where the binder ends. If you have paper newsletters going forward that you would like to donate to the files, or your own memories to share, contact me at suj22ascot@gmail.com. The more we know, the more we grow as a very special watercolor organization.

Stay tuned and keep painting.

“Life is the Art of Drawing Without an Eraser”

John W. Gardner

We all have friends in our lives that are artists. They may be exhibiting artists or they may be private artists who create only for their family and close friends. Within less than a two-week period I have lost one of each from my life making me reflect on their lives and my own.

The first was my friend Lucille. We met in September, 2007 at the first watercolor class of the semester. She walked into the room, surveyed all of the attendees and asked me if she could sit with me. Lucille told me she picked me out because of my smile. We were class partners for years. I picked her up for each class after that. We drank tea, ate cookies and talked watercolor.

She was a tiny lady, a very friendly lady, and she was a wonderful and inspirational artist. When she was a young woman right out of high school she was going to be a newspaper illustrator. If you're old enough you know what I'm talking about. In the fashion section of the newspaper, the ads use to be hand drawn instead of photos. Lucille was offered a scholarship, however, it did not include “room and board.” That dream remained just that — a dream. Lucille married a wonderful man, had two children, had two grand children and continued her art through adult classes.

The second was Noreen. I met Noreen in 1976 when she and her husband, Jerry, purchased the home next door to my parents. We became very good friends. Noreen and her husband had no children. Jerry worked for a brewery in Milwaukee. Noreen stayed home. She took care of the home and the one acre yard. She became very close to my folks. Noreen was always busy.

Noreen was very talented. Not only was she an excellent artist she could also refinish furniture. Not just any furniture, she once refinished an old piano! She also did woodworking with her husband. She could do anything. We would talk for hours over coffee or wine coolers creating — things. In 1985 Noreen, Jerry, and I pulled my folks huge flagpole out of its support in the front yard and carried it to sawhorses in the backyard. That was the end of Jerry's participation until Noreen and I were done. We scraped, prepped, and then painted it. With Jerry's help we reinstalled it back in the front yard. My parents took an extended vacation that year. Boy, were they surprised to see that gleaming white pole when they returned. Noreen was always ready, willing, and able to help with any project no matter how hair-brained. Oh, and remember the “no children” part of this story? Well, suddenly after 20 years of marriage, Noreen and Jerry had a child. And a wonderful young lady she has turned out to be!

What does all of this mean to us? This means don't ever stop creating your art! Live an artful, art filled life in the manner you want to live it — without an eraser! Show your work to many or only a few. But show it! Never allow others to influence your art. Enjoy your art your way.

Sincerely, Carol Husslein

Thank You, Arnold A. Grossman

Rarely has CWA received a gift that supports our organization so generously. Imagine our surprise when such a gift came to us posthumously last fall. The Estate of Arnold A. Grossman gifted California Watercolor Association in the amount of five thousand dollars in appreciation for years of learning and proud participation as a member of CWA.

Who was Arnold A. Grossman?

Mr. Grossman was born March 23, 1923, in Napa, California. He spent his formative years in Oakland and showed an early interest in the arts. Following service in World War II, he attended the University of California and eventually settled in San Francisco. His passion for the arts encompassed symphonies, opera, theater, art exhibits at the De Young Museum and Palace of Fine Arts, as well as galleries throughout the Bay Area.

A man with a great passion for art, he joined the fledgling East Bay Watercolor Society in 1970. As an early member of EBWS he helped foster the goals that form the centerpiece our organization today. In 1975 the East Bay Watercolor Society recognized him for his talent and volunteer spirit as a Signature Member, one of the first to attain such an honor. In 1996 the East Bay Watercolor Society changed its name to California Watercolor Society. Mr. Grossman continued to participate in and support CWA all his life. He enjoyed plein air events in Monterey with Jade Fon, participated in the Coastal Arts League and the Marin Society of Artists, in addition to his membership in CWA.

He spent his final years at the Rhoda Goldman Plaza in San Francisco where he participated in art shows and gave classes.

Mr. Grossman passed away peacefully on July 29, 2016, having enjoyed a rewarding life in his passion for the arts. His bequest of five thousand dollars will be used to fund a Memorial Award for the CWA National Exhibitions in recognition of artistic excellence.

Thank you Arnold A. Grossman for sharing your passion with the California Watercolor Association.

Questions and answers about watercolor art

Send your watercolor questions to ejohns5513@aol.com

Ruth Ellen Hoag

Ruth Ellen Hoag, who will be the distance judge for the June 2017 San Ramon show, started her career as an artist by studying music. She graduated from the Manhattan School of Music with a major in French horn and worked as a musician for over thirty years. Ruth finds many similarities between the study of music and visual arts, including rhythm, tone, composition, and perhaps most importantly, the emotional content that is in music and in visual art as well.

Ruth works primarily with the figure; her paintings are usually compositions of more than one and sometimes many figures. Ruth said, "Constructions are made from pieces. Each character is drawn separately in my sketchbook. From there I choose which ones to place in a setting where they will exist and interact in an invented world. They are like playing with paper dolls given stories to tell. In this process, I come to know each one in an intimate way. As actors in a play, some characters show up in more than one painting." Ruth continues, "I am creating an environment with my characters and they all have a story to tell. Some characters are disconnected from others in the painting. They are real people with real stories to tell. Creating a large painting with many figures takes a long time."

Warm Spell by Ruth Ellen Hoag: Watercolor on paper, 2016

Warm Spell is about people enjoying pleasant weather in a New York City park. Ruth explains the characters are all close together and yet not relating to one another. On the other hand, two dogs are making eye contact. Ruth says, "Creating the painting shows how I feel about the characters. I put something into it and hope that viewers get something from the image. I never tell anyone what the story is."

Someday in the Park by Ruth Ellen Hoag Watercolor on paper, 2016

Ruth has always been interested in watercolor painting, but she has expanded her range to include opaque paints like many other watermedia artists.

Dear readers, I hope you will take a look at Someday in the Park and think about the story that is narrated here. In considering the narrative, you become the viewer, who is one half of the narrative process as explained by the artist. Ruth discusses her work with watermedia: "While working mainly in watercolor, I often work with other mediums over a watercolor surface using India ink, opaque pigments, acrylic, as well as incorporating techniques such as scratching or drawing into a wet surface. I enjoy the process, the discovery, and the results. I don't consider the medium to be what is important. As I embark on a painting, I'll use whatever feels right."

Ruth created a series of paintings on dance with opaque paints because she found showing motion easier with opaque. The inspiration came because Ruth and her husband love to dance; “we observe many dancers and while the painting is not of any special dancers, I was trying to capture movement and painted in a very gestural way.” The painting Balboa is one of the Dance series.

Balboa by Ruth Ellen Hoag: Watermedia on paper. 2012

As an accomplished watermedia artist, Ruth has many national and regional honors. Ruth earned Signature status in these international and national organizations: American Watercolor Society and National Watercolor Society, San Diego Watercolor Society, Rocky Mountain National Watermedia, Watercolor West and California Watercolor Association. Locally work is represented by Kathryn Designs in Montecito. Ruth Ellen Hoag will be one of the judges for the 2017 San Ramon show. I am looking forward to the show and working with Ruth.

“Women’s Alpine Celebration”

The Journaling and Painting Retreat at Lake Alpine

August 22-27, 2017 with Elaine Frenett and Jean Warren. Imagine deep connections, inquisitive women, nature’s still wonder, and expanded self-awareness, as we explore journaling and how it relates to the art of watercolor. In this unique retreat you will discover how to combine eyes and mind with heart! More Information: www.VisualArtJournaling.wordpress.com or call (541) 944-2196.

Michael Reardon – Provence

Please join Michael Reardon for a week-long workshop in Provence this fall. The dates are September 18-25, 2017. Imagine painting ancient stone villages, dramatic landscapes, and delightful Mediterranean light. The group size is quite small and there are just a few spaces left. For more information contact Michael at mreardon@mreardon.com or write the organizer, Jackie, at contact@frenchescapade.com or call her at (510) 483-5713.
