“Don’t Blend In” SWENSON

“Don’t Blend In”

It resonates in my mind...

Think about everything in your life whether it is art, music, poetry or the flowers planted in your garden, the scarf you tie around your neck, your hair color.

What?

Why?

I believe as soon as we are old enough to start developing our personalities “don’t blend in” comes into play. As babies we have a loud cry to gain attention. As a toddler we become really great at chucking those lima beans at the nearest adult.

As young children, if allowed to get ready for school by ourselves, we wear very interesting outfits. As teenagers, if our parents are open-minded, we may sport exciting hair colors or styles. These traits often continue until we are ready for a “real” job, then we are expected to “blend in” with our co-workers. Blend in means the same attire as everyone else, the same hair styles, the same speech...you get the point. We become conditioned to “blend in.” We are not supposed to rock the boat. We are supposed to conform. The people in charge have always placed restrictions on others in order to control...everything including art.

Then, the new employee with a visible tattoo walks into the office. OMG! A tattoo! I remember this moment so vividly after reading Brenda’s article. It started me thinking along the lines of how restrictive we become always trying to “blend in.”

I wonder as I often do about how much we have lost to every facet of our lives because we are supposed to “blend in.” We crush creativity and end up with mediocrity. Who cares if that person has their nose pierced? Who cares if their hair is green? Who cares if they’re wearing pants instead of a dress? What does any of that have to do with intelligence and creativity?

While we’re off for the holiday season and approach 2020, please “don’t blend in.” Instead put your unique self into your art and your life. I can’t wait to see your art in 2020!

Our workshop registrar, Joe Tringali, sent me this article written by Brenda Swenson. Thank you, Joe.

Happy Holidays to All

Don't Blend In

Last weekend I visited three exhibits: the National Watercolor Society, Watercolor West and California Art Club. I was humbled and awe struck. It left me thinking, how can I stand out in a world where skill and originality is unparalleled to another time in history?

The next day I drove to Ventura to visit family. I traveled along the old 118 through Moorpark. I've driven this road hundreds of times. The drive takes a little longer but I enjoy the view. I like seeing what crops are growing in the field, produce stands and flowers. I was treated to large fields of bright orange marigolds. It's stunning to see a field of bright orange. To my surprise in the middle of the field was a single sunflower standing alone...it took my breathe away.

It got me thinking. There's lots of clones and copy cats in the art world. Our job is to be the best at showing the world who we are. So how do I stand out in a field?

- *Focus on my own work
- *Build skills
- *Be myself
- *Paint what I know
- *Find subjects that make my heart sing... share that with the world.

and thank you!

*Happy Painting!

Inspirational Yosemite

Half Dome is one of the iconic landmarks of Yosemite National Park. Last month the Oakland veterans had the good fortune to paint from photos taken by Michael Friedland who had just returned from teaching there this October. Michael demonstrated how to make things dimensional. We worked on our paintings letting colors mix on the paper to establish the Half Dome shape. Michael reminded us that color was relative, for example, not all skies need to be blue.

As the group sketched from the photos, the conversation went to who visits Yosemite. Michael had discovered that visitors were (pretty much) either tourists or rock climbers. Many employees of the park are serious rock climbers. After dark one can see lights on the face of El Capitan where the climbers spend the nights hanging from the wall in slings. Most of us wondered at rock climbers' motivations.

The first of the vets to share his work had greatly simplified the landscape to just a slab of rock, surrounded by a yellow sky and a plain minimal foreground. He went on to tell a tale of how he first scaled Half Dome when he was nine years old. Then when eleven years old he scaled Half Dome rope free. Furthermore, at fifteen made his first rescue. We were all amazed and dumbfounded to learn this until he broke out laughing and we realized that he was pulling our leg. His tall tale had enriched his artwork and got us all laughing.

The rest of the group had worked at truer, more realistic interpretations of the valley floor, trees and rising rock formations. We found that a range of values increased our success, but as always we had plenty more to experience in the wide world of watercolor painting.

November was a busy month for everyone. We presented our annual art show during the Veteran's Day weekend. Choosing representative works became yet another learning experience as we matted work for the show. Geanna was instrumental in deciding how best to present her work. It was exciting to see how the matting brought out the beauty of everyone's work. Victoria and I mounted the work on the windows in a busy hallway intersection. Judging by reactions, it is a hit! Ceremonies were getting underway as we finished. All branches of service were represented and attendees were appreciative and in good spirits.

The Memory Project with John Swett High School

CWA Community Outreach is pleased to announce that we have embarked upon a wonderful outreach opportunity with the Memory Project. This is a nonprofit organization that invites art teachers and their students to create portraits for youth around the world who have faced substantial challenges, such as neglect, abuse, loss of parents and extreme poverty.

CWA is working with a local high school, John Swett, in Crockett, California. CWA has connected the new John Swett student art club with the Memory Project's Portrait Program. They have just received their first set of photos from ten children in Afghanistan. Our high school students will paint portraits from these photos. Once the portraits are completed, they will be sent back and shared with excited children awaiting these art works from another country so far away. CWA will be funding this, as well as supplying some art materials.

This is an extremely powerful program, and we are so excited to be a part of it. We look forward to connecting more local schools in the future.

Dear Sheila Cain,

Thank you so very much for sponsoring the “Best Watercolor grades 11-12” award for the watercolor piece “Night Terrors” I entered into the Alameda County Fair this year. That piece was part of a series I made based on a concentration of traumatic experiences that occur in many people, and it means quite a lot to me that one of them was recognized and appreciated.

Having my work be respected in this manner, as a young adult trying to make it in the field of art, is both an incredible feat for me, and a boost to the understanding that art is definitely appreciated in this world, unlike what some may say. I am grateful to have the chance to thank you personally.

With sincere gratitude,

Aaliyah Gholamipour

Night Terrors by Aaliyah Gholamipour

Every year CWA juries and awards student artworks at the Alameda County Fair. This year we received a thank you letter from a high school student that I want to share with you. It shows how important our CWA organization can be to a young person. This letter has made me proud to work for and be a member of California Watercolor Association.

Plein Air

No Plein Air Until March 2020!

Check for updates on our website and social media!

Clean out your STUDIO, KITCHEN TABLE, SPARE ROOM, & bring all those art goodies that you no longer use!

Remember the workshop where you bought every material suggested, and only used once? How about all the acrylic supplies you stocked up on, but now you stick to transparent watercolors? What's in all those boxes left over from your last move? Think of all the paints, brushes, paper, books, doo-dads, palettes that are just taking up space in your space. Free yourself, and give someone else a chance to try out your unwanted supplies! CWA members may sign up for a free table (banquet size, so you'll have lots of room). You must reserve in advance by March 24, 2020. You can accept cash and checks from all of your customers, or credit cards with your mobile device if you have a card reader. As always, the public is welcome, so spread the word about this sale!
