Divergence and From the Beginning by Juanita Hagberg

Amazing Possibilities Using Watercolor on Yupo

Juanita started painting watercolors after her career as a public school teacher. Not content to only use watercolor paper, her exploration of non-traditional substrates led to her discovery of Yupo. She enjoys working on this unpredictable surface and the creative possibilities it presents. The unusually named paper, which is actually a polypropylene (plastic) material, suits Juanita's intuitive and experimental method of painting. While it can be difficult to control paint applications using this surface, it nevertheless provides opportunities for wonderful surprises, textures, and rich values. Paint sits on top of the surface and can be applied thickly, burnished, and subjected to various textural applications. Both representational and more abstract artists will find exciting options when painting on Yupo. Additionally, very large works (up to 60" x 10 yds) are possible, and the paint can be completely wiped off if the result is not satisfactory. Many painters love the presentation option of not framing under glazing.

Juanita likes to push watercolor to inventive and less predictable outcomes. Her quest to paint what something feels like, rather than a literal rendering, has led her to abstraction. Nature is always her subject. She loves to be outdoors and still does impressionistic plein air paintings. Her studio work derives from memories and emotional connections to her experiences in nature. For the past year and a half, her work has been inspired by a rafting and hiking trip to the Grand Canyon and Colorado River.

The Drawing Board

California Watercolor Association

Each month in 2021, a different member of the CWA Board of Directors will have the opportunity to write an art-related article for our members.

It's my turn to write an article for our monthly newsletter, and it's now more than one year since the COVID-19 pandemic forced us to shelter in our homes and isolate. For painters who gain much of their inspiration from exploring or traveling, this created quite a challenge for me. During this time, I wondered if I was limiting my creativity by copying a photograph? Was I somehow a less authentic painter? Was it even OK to consider my work a "real" painting?

Facing quarantine also provided me some added time to peruse online art blogs, where I found it to be a common question, if not a heated debate. Even well-respected master painters have vastly differing opinions on this issue. I truly admire all those artists who deftly paint from recollection or pure imagination. I hope to reach that ability in my watercolor journey. But I have found that painting from my photos has been time well spent.

It has kept me painting!

As a less-than-advanced painter, I have used reference photos to simply exercise watercolor techniques — capturing shadows and light and the importance of value studies — not to mention capturing the mood of a particular moment. It also led me to explore other ideas and new approaches, such as staging my own still life to photograph. Many good teachers are now offering workshops and classes online, and I've found teachers who embrace painting from original photographs and go to great lengths to set up those reference photos.

Painting from my own photos has certainly been a lifeline for me, and I imagine for other painters confined to painting in their studios. I plan to use the remainder of the time I am confined to my home to continue to "brush up" on my painting skills.

Happy Painting!

Community Outreach

Memory Project: Student Point of View — Mia Pierce

Roy from the Cameroons as rendered by Mia Pierce

CWA Community Outreach has sponsored a group of Clayton Valley Charter High School students in the Memory Project. The Clayton Valley art teacher, Evan Hughes, says of his students, "I have awesome students... many of my senior AP students have spent three or four years as my students, so I've been lucky to work with them before the COVID pandemic." In the following interview one student, Mia Pierce, tells her story of participating in the Memory Project.

Website at www.memoryproject.org.

Student and artist, Mia Pierce

1. What sparked your interest in the Memory Project? ie painting a portrait of a student from the Cameroons.

"I wanted to expand my skills with rendering a portrait, and also help Roy (the child I had the privilege of drawing) get a neat little picture of himself."

2. How would you describe the best part of this project to a friend?

"I think being able to appreciate how different everyone is while you're working on your piece is soothing, to be honest."

3. What did you learn from doing it?

"Rendering the image, I felt like I took a step into a new means to process colors. It was like working with a new material, even though I was using the same things."

4. How do you feel acquainted with the student you painted?

"In the most concise way possible (since I don't know what words can quite describe my current feelings), the image I saw of Roy had a very gentle feeling coming off of it. I really wish I could do more than just draw for the kid, but I hope it makes him happy."

5. How did this art project differ from others you have done?

"I don't often draw portraits of other people, let alone get the opportunity to render in the way that I did, so I appreciate this step out of my comfort zone."

6. What have you learned about the people of the Cameroons having done this portrait?

"We were only given the image and not much else on the people of the Cameroons, I can only really say that their clothing is bright, expressive, and is probably homemade to represent their local identity."

7. What have you learned about yourself from this project?

"I think I realized that I'd like to learn more about other cultures and REALLY get to know them so if I am to draw them I can interpret them in a more genuine manner. It wouldn't sit right with me if I was creating art that misconstrued the actual sentiments of the culture."

8. How would you describe the best part of this project to a friend?

"Seeing everything come together when you're starting to have doubts is arguably the best feeling when drawing a portrait. When everything is laid down and put into place, it clicks, and you can recognize a person and feel a similar energy emanating from it like the reference."

9. What was the easiest and most difficult part of making these portraits?

"Personally, sketching is very easy. Laying down shapes and getting the basic forms down is something I am very familiar with. On the contrary, I suppose tweaking adjustments (such as the placement of eyes or the mouth) in the middle of the whole rendering process is something I dread."

10. What did you learn from the experience?

"In retrospect, I believe that this experience has not only allowed me to take a step out into different forms of art, but also revealed a sort of feeling that I can do so much more with my art. A part of me believes that this portrait isn't enough...but it's a starting point. I hope that eventually many other children can get the support they need in whatever situation they're in and I can do more than just draw pictures to accomplish that."

CALIFORNIA WATERCOLOR ASSOCIATION 2021 WATERCOLOR ONLINE WORKSHOP SERIES

CWA strives to provide our students with some of the best workshops with the top professional artists of our time. Please join in the fun. We look forward to meeting you.

David Savellano, MCWA Vacation Journaling — Ink and Watercolor 2-Day ZOOM Online Workshop July 17–18, 2021

Advanced Beginner to Advanced
CWA Members $150 Non-Members $210

David is an artist who works primarily en plein air (outdoors), creating watercolor paintings that capture random moments—on the street, in nature, and wherever else his portable easel or sketchbook takes him. “I enjoy working outdoors because it’s unpredictable and lends itself to a kind of spontaneity you just can’t get in a studio,” he says.

David lives in the Bay Area and is a native Californian, which is reflected in the sun-dappled streets and waterfront imagery that dominate his work. Although largely self-taught as a watercolor painter, he credits his 30 years as a practicing architect with having given him the drawing skills and strong sense of perspective that have elevated his artwork to a professional level.

David’s passion for outdoor painting isn’t limited to his own sketches and paintings, he also teaches it, offering classes distinguished by their intimate size and the generous amount of personal instruction he provides. His expert instruction enables students to improve their artistic skills and knowledge.

Michael Holter, NWS, OPS, SWS, SWA Watercolor Impressionism: Faces and Places 3-Day ZOOM Online Workshop | October 15–16, 2021

Advanced Beginner to Advanced
CWA Members $225 Non-Members $285

Michael’s workshop will include insightful discussion of important aspects of figurative work such as composition and capturing a mood. You will spend time on exercises designed to heighten your techniques. There will be real-time demonstrations as well as high-speed video demos of Michael working in his studio. Students of all levels and interests will enjoy Michael’s personal and up-front style of teaching as well as his inspirational approach to his work. Students will leave prepared and challenged to move on to a new level of confidence in painting portraits in watercolor.

Juanita Hagberg

While there, she painted small plein air impressions often in challenging conditions. With so many visual impressions and emotional connections to the Canyon, Juanita wanted to express those feelings on Yupo. She is now 50+ watercolors on Yupo into her series based on her memories and experiences of being in that remarkable environment.

Hagberg's widely collected watercolors have been juried into The de Young Open, The Signature American Watermedia Exhibition, and Yosemite Renaissance. Her articles and paintings have been published in the Splash series, Watercolor and Watercolor Artist Magazines.
